Today I finally have met my cousin Lyla. She and her family were staying in Sydney now. Mum and I took them a famous restaurant. A lot of people were line up outside the place. It has only four small tables so there were enough tables for the customers. When it was finally our turn, there had was only very few food to choose from. We had to eat in a hurry so the restaurant was to be closed soon.

This afternoon Lyla and I were went to a charity fun fair of my friend Harry school. Harry said the event was to raise money for the refugees which suffered from an earthquake in Indonesia a few weeks since. When there is an earthquake, many buildings destroyed. Lots of people have to live in aid camps who are usually very crowd. The life there is very hard. The water after an earthquake is usually dirty to drink. There is not enough food nor medicine. People are both hungry and weak. They become very sick. I hope they can get less help and everyone can give to them a helping hand.
