

Do this before you read the next chapter

Watch or listen to a political discussion programme, such as the BBC's Question Time, or BBC Radio 4's Today programme, and see how many examples of logical fallacies you can find (there will be lots ...).

Do the same thing with opinion / editorial articles in either printed newspapers or online.

In your debating club, have your coach write the titles of all these fallacies on pieces of card. Everyone picks a card. They then have to give a short speech on a topic using the fallacy they have been given. Other members of the club have to spot what the fallacy is and rebut it.
